Background – Customer Bills, Winter 2022-23

- Higher costs for everything – from groceries to gasoline to monthly energy bills – are a topic of conversation in Wyoming communities and across the country. We recognize the impact that bill increases have on our customers and we're here to help.
- Black Hills Energy is helping customers use less energy through conservation and energy efficiency projects, while managing their monthly budgets with our Budget Billing option and energy assistance programs for those who need it.
- We're also committed to managing our costs to keep our customers' bills affordable. We carefully plan for the needed investments we make in system resilience. We keep customer impacts top of mind when planning the programs intended to add value to the communities we serve, balancing long-term benefits with near-term impacts.
- Our focus is on delivering the safe, reliable energy that our customers depend on. Black Hills Energy employees are committed to serving our communities – now and for decades to come – and we're in this together.

Frequently Asked Questions

Why are energy bills so much higher this winter?

Natural gas costs and weather-driven usage are the primary factors behind the increased costs our customers are seeing this winter.

- Natural gas: Natural gas prices have increased substantially over the past year-plus – doubling and even tripling from the historically low prices that we've become accustomed to over the past 8-10 years. Black Hills Energy customers in Wyoming see the cost of natural gas reflected in their monthly bills via a quarterly gas cost adjustment. Most recently, the GCA was set at $0.7291 per therm, effective Dec. 1, 2022, through February 2023; this is about 48% more compared to the same period last year, which was set at $0.4923 per therm.
- Customer usage: Additionally, Wyoming has seen more winter weather and colder temperatures compared to last winter. When temperatures outside are colder, we use more energy to keep our homes and businesses warmer – even if the thermostat is set to the same temperature.

My thermostat is consistently set at 68 degrees, so how could my usage be up?

Weather plays a significant role in how much natural gas we use – the bigger difference between indoor and outdoor temperatures, the more energy is being consumed by a heating system.

What can customers do to protect themselves from higher natural gas costs?

It's not every day companies encourage customers to buy less of what they sell, but that's exactly what Black Hills Energy is doing this winter. We're ramping up efforts to communicate with customers, sharing tips on how to use less energy in their homes to help save money.

Tips range from easy and inexpensive – like lowering the thermostat by a couple of degrees and closing curtains to keep warm air inside – to more involved projects like insulating the attic or installing weather-stripping around doors and windows to keep out drafts.

- When you are home and awake, set the thermostat as high as comfortable on warm days, and as low as is comfortable on cold days. A smart or programmable thermostat can make it easy to set back your temperature.
- If you have a heat pump, maintain a moderate setting or use a programmable thermostat specially designed for use with heat pumps.
- Run complete loads of laundry and dishes to avoid using more hot water and energy than necessary.
- Skip the drying cycle on your dishwasher. Instead, prop the door open once dishes are washed and allow them to air dry.
- Use weather stripping and caulking around doors and windows to seal any holes or gaps, reducing energy waste.
- Turn down your hot water heater to 120 degrees and ensure the water heater is insulated properly. Water heaters are the second largest energy user in a house, accounting for about 18% of an energy bill.

We know that conservation and energy efficiency measures alone may not be enough to help some customers, so we encourage customers struggling with monthly bills to review op

- Payment arrangements: Extended payment terms to help customers get back on track.
- Budget Billing: A free payment plan that averages the amount owed each month.
- Energy Assistance: Energy assistance programs supported by Black Hills Energy, like Black Hills Cares, can be accessed by visiting the Assistance Programs page on our website (www.blackhillsenergy.com/assistance-programs) or by contacting 211 (211.org).
